Here are a few reasons why H. S Stout has succeeded in building Darnell. up the largest tailoring business in Paris:

FIRST-He recognized the fact that five years ago that the only on a visit with his parents Dr. and Mrs. day of big profits and small sales was past.

SECOND—He cuts the price of tailor-made garments at least 40

THIRD-He kept up the quality of his materials, his styles and his workmanship.

FOURTH—He always does as he advertised.

AS A RESULT.

As a result of this system he has built up a large trade that appreciates the fact that they save twenty dollars on a single Suit or Overcoat. "Many customers at a small profit rather than a few customers from a visit with J. W. Larkin and at a big profit," says H. S. Stout.

If you want credit, your high-price tailor gladly extends it, for he makes you pay dearly for it in the end.

Why not turn over a new leaf-wear the best, save money, by giving H. S. Stout a trial? He makes the Finest Imported Suits for

A DESTRUCTIVE CYCLONE.

Kingston, the Capital of the Island of St Vincent, Totally Destroyed and 300 Lives Lost in the Island,

ST. THOMAS, D. W. I., Sept. 15 .- A poat from the Island of St. Vincent, a rived Wednesday at the Island of Grenada and reports that St. Vincent has experienced the most violent and destructive cyclone ever known there. Kingston, the capital of St. Vincent, is totally destroyed. It is estimated that 300 lives have been lost in that island and that 20,000 people are homeless. The bodies of the dead are being buried in trenches. Thousands are starving or being fed at the public ex-

The amount of property destroyed in St. Vincent can not yet be estimated. Every small house in town and many large ones have been destroyed. The demolished buildings include churches, stores and almost all the estate buildings. Three large ships are ashore on the Winward coast and many smaller vessels are stranded.

The Empress' Assassin Will Be Placed in a Small, Dark Cell.

He Will Be Fed Just Enough to Enable Him to Support Life-Violent Anti-Italian Demonstrations Take Place-Six Killed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—A dispatch to the World from Geneva says:

The life imprisonment with solitary confinement in store for the Austrian empress' assassin is declared by those acquainted with Swiss prisons to be vastly worse than death.

A correspondent who recently visited the chief prison of the canton of Vaud, where the assassin will be confined, of troops, the Principado de Asturias describes as sad in the extreme the result of solitary life imprisonment. One man whom he saw there, the perpetrator of a series of murders in the mountains, had been in the same cell for 15 years, with the result that he completely lost his reason.

The governor of the prison confessed that in view of this and other similar cases his views of capital punishment had undergone a complete change and that he was now strongly in favor of the death penalty.

Mr. Ridgely, the American consul here, was informed Monday night by a cabinet officer that much as it would please the Geneva authorities to send the assassin to Austria for trial, it can not be done under the constitution. Had the crime been committed in the private apartments of the empress instead of on the public street, extradition would have been possible.

Upon a sentence of life imprisonment the assassin will be placed in a small, dark cell, from which he will never emerge and will be fed just enough to enable him to support life.

London, Sept. 14. - Special dispatches from Vienna say the entire Austrian-Hungarian empire is infuriated against the Italians, as a result of the assassination of the Empress Elizabeth, and that violent anti-Italian demonstrations have taken place at Trieste, where the Italians and natives have been fighting in the streets with sticks and stones, some times using revolvers. Six deaths are reported to have occurred there and the troops were called out to suppress the disturbances.

At Gratz an Italian peddler has been lynched, and at Vienna fully fifteen hundred Italians employed on the municipal works have been summarily dismissed, in order to avert a popular revolt. The Italian embassy at Vienna is guarded by a strong body of in-

EMPRESS' FUNERAL TRAIN.

It Made Short Stoppages at the Principal Towns in the Swiss Territory-The Assassin Wants to Be Executed.

Berne, Sept. 15.—The funeral train bearing the remains of Empress Elizabeth made short stoppages at the principal towns in Swiss territory.

Everywhere along the route church bells tolled and in some places wreaths were presented.

The assassin, it is said, has written to the president of the Swiss confederation, asking to be tried at Lucerne, where capital punishment is in force. He now admits that he attended an anarchists' club at Lausanno, where it was decided to assassinate some great personage. Six members of the club have been placed under arrest.

The assassination has produced a great revulsion of feeling among the Swiss people in faver of capital pun-

THE NEWSPAPERS OF JAPAN.

They Are Almost Universally in Favor of the United States Holding and Permanently Governing the Philippines.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The newspapers reaching the state department in the official mails from the east show that the almost universal expression in the public press of Japan is in favor of the United States holding permanently and governing the Philippine Islands. The position taken is that this will be in the interest of peace and commerce and good government. The editorials insist that this is the only issue of the matter that will satisfy the highest interests of the islands and the demands of civilization. The papers declare that the United States in assuming the control of the islands will receive the moral support, if not the active co-operation, of Japan and Great Britain.

TURKS WILL NOT WITHDRAW

The Sultan Defies the Powers and Declares That Great Britain Provoked Those Disorders in Candia.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 15. — The Turkish government has sent a circular to the powers alleging that the British provoked the disorders at Candia, claiming that the present situation is due to the measures adopted by the powers in Crete and protesting against the bombardment of Candia. The porte announces its refusal to withdraw the Turkish troops from Crete, in spite of the decision of the admirals that such a step is absolutely necessary. The circular has made a bad impression in diplomatic circles. CANDIA, Island of Crete, Sept. 14.-The Rashi Bazouks have consented to disarm, provided their arms are de-

Her cargo consisted in the main of commissary supplies for the regiments now in Porto Rico. She carried also $5,000 worth of delicacies and two ambulances for the army hospitals.

Private Bank Fails.

LAGRANGE, Ind., Sept. 15.-The private banking institution of Daniel F. Parsons, at Burr Oak, has made an assignment to A. J. Himbaugh. The bank has been in existence for about 30 years, and was considered very stable. There are a large number of depositors, and the village was in a state of excitement all day. Liabilities estimated at from $60,000 to $75,000. The assets consisted chiefly of real estate and mining shares, and the assignee states that Parsons is penni-

'You're right,' he told me, 'but the boys will get there.' At night, when we were all so hungry, I ventured to inquire if a further movement were contemplated till your army was provisioned. Then the officers, who were gentlemanly, all laughed, and said the army would think about rations when they 'got there.' The second day we met many of your wounded men coming back as we were going forward. When the colonel asked them about the fighting, so many times I heard them say 'We got there.' And afterwards I also heard those words used very often. But it is so difficult for me to explain so my own people will understand it, what nature of tactics is 'get there.' "-Boston Transcript.

The War Is Over

And now our thoughts are all of peace and home. There are, too often, people to be found who have no home, and it is to them these few words are addressed. If you realy want a home you can easily get one, but you should act at once before the relapse from the war puts prices on the advance. In Marinette County, Wisconsin, the very inest farming land is to be had now at a most modest figure. Excellent home markets are at hand to take whatever the farmer raises, and good prices are given. These lands are on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and full information concerning them will cheerfully be furnished by C. E. Rollins, Immigration Agent, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago.

A Cleveland man who went east to spend is vacation brought home with him what he thinks is a new mother-in-law story. Mother-in-law stories are a drug on the market, but this one seems to be a little less druggy than usual. A man and his wife went to Europe and the man's mother-in-law went along. Up to this point there is no novelty in the story. On the voyage the mother-inlaw fell ill and died. Of course she had to be buried at sea, and so the usual canvas sack was made, but instead of an iron weight to sink the body they used a big bag of coal. Faith sat beside her unconscious sleeper, listening to the sounds which reported all that she ever knew of those incredible scenes that have gone down on the annals of this region as "the touched him where he stood. He massacre of Fourth of July canyon." Her senses were blunted, her mind re- plainly beyond the shoreward shadow, fused to act; her heart crushed the life out of her with its beating.

Now was the time to say good-bynot the potential good-by she had bidden him an hour ago, but the actual parting, at the brink of the river of death. Many were crossing the dark waters to the city of refuge who would never return. She bent over her sleeper, and kissed him softly, but the sob that forced her heart against his aroused him, and he spoke to her suddenly in his

He held his breath and looked at her keenly.

"Your lips are cold; your hands are cold. Why are you saying good night?" "The boat is late," said Faith in a hollow voice. "We cannot go till the boat comes. You are sick: rest now-do rest; this is your only chance!"

She put her hands upon him, with soft, shuddering touches, trying with all the strength of her love to master her fear, that she might have power to lull him into obliviousness of the awful sounds of the night. Under the trees it was quite dusk; he could see nothing, but she felt that he was listening.

"What is that firing?" "Only some men," gasped Faith. "But what are they shooting at?"

"Shooting? Oh, at a mark." "Oh, I say! in the dark!" laughed Darcie softly. He was drifting off again, as his speech betrayed. "Are they drunk? What are they shouting about?" "It's the other men who are shouting," Faith lied to him, feebly. "What other men? Is this a stag picnic? O Lord! O Faith, dear!" Faith hardly knew what he was say ing, but she welcomed any wildness, profanity-anything but his own low, steady tones.

"Be quiet, Darcie, dear!" she whis-

"Darcie, dear!" he repeated, foolishly. "God bless me, but this is nicewhat a brute I was! Are you ever going to be friends with me again?"

He nestled his sick head close to her lap, contentedly, and gave himself up to the exquisite sense of her cold, soft touch moving over his hand in the dark.

Faith was quieted; she had reached the limit of emotional fear, and now a species of insensibility crept over her -the reaction after the shock. She wondered why she could not feel as she ought the peril of all those other men who were strangers to her affection. Where was Mike-always rash with himself? Was he safe? And how was it with the honest Cassons-the wife waiting with her little sleepy brood about her, to learn perhaps that they were fatherless?

She started back from her relaxed outlook and hid herself as a man came running, like one pursued, out from a group of black birch trees that stood together shivering in an open windy space. He ran uncertainly, this way and that, as if crazed with fear. His dog-hearted pursuer covered him with deliberate aim. It was pitiful to see him waver between the chances of the river and of the broken plain below. He was exhausted wih running; his chest labored in hard, painful gasps; his legs were giving under him. The next moment he stumbled and fell. The "scab" hunter came up and turned him over with his foot, keeping the muzzle of his rifle close to his chest. He said something brief, which Faith did not hear. The man never spoke, but threw out his hands expressively on the sod. The other searched his clothes and took all that he had in money or small valuables and, stirring him with his foot,

"Git-git out from here! I'll give you till I count 60."

The hunted man sprang up and ran Once he turned his head over his shoulder, and saw his pursuer following him with cool aim. He plunged into the bushes, cleared the bank and splashed into the river. The man with the rifle stood on the bank and waited. Faith could have watched till the swimmer's head showed a dark spot parting the current in midstream; then a bullet went clipping through the wild-rose thicket. The black spot turned toward the light; it was the man's face; he was taking his last look at the sky; his hands went up; he sank-and a coil of ripples unwound in widening circles toward the > Faith crept back to her place; her sleeper still slept. The man by the river turned her way, and set his feet again upon the bank. She slipped the mantle from her shoulders, and laid Darcie's face. The silk-lined folds settled into place; he did not move. So he had looked when she had thought him dead. She clasped her hands upon her knees, and bent her head upon them. Steps came up the bank and paused close beside her; she merely breathed. There was silence; then a voice said:

"Who is your man, my dear?" She did not answer. Dan Rafferty studied the two figures attentively :

"Is this you, Miss Bingham? and our folks lookin' for you high and low! And who's this party you are hidin' out with?"

Faith raised her hand, but she did not speak. "Show me his face! What's the mat ter with him?" Rafferty made a step for-

"Keep your hands off the dead!" said

"Dead, is he? I don't think you can play that with me. If he's dead, it'll no harm him to show his face."

"There is a dead man whose face you will see in the day you go to meet your God!" Faith pointed to the river. She had risen, and placed herself between Rafferty and her sleeper; and was aware that Darcie was stirring, and her flesh rose in horror; she had no hope, only to postpone the moment of discovery.

"I know you, Rafferty," said the desperate girl, "I will bear witness against you, if you dare come one step nearer. Coward! you took his money, and then you took his life!"

"Come, now, that's no way for a lady what a sweet girl you are! Heavens! to talk! I want to see who's your best feller. Pull that thing off his face! bet I know who it is. Don't I know them English shoes? Well, if you won't, then stand aside. See here, now; I don't want to put me hands on you.' "Ah!" cried Faith, simply shudder-

A quarter of a mile away the troops were disembarking. The orders demanded a quiet landing, but Mike had heard the roll call on board the boat before she touched the shore. And now the tramp of feet could plainly be distinguished treading the deck of the wharf-boat; now they were mustering on the ground. Two by two, in columns of twos, the companies were marching as one man. Steady, through the night, on came the solid, cadenced tread. As sharp as pistol shots rang the words of command. The white stripes, the steel points, gleamed through the trees. Silence; and "piercing sweet," O voice of rescue in the dark distance, the bugles sounded:

"Attention!" It sent the blood to the hearts of all who heard that midnight call. Darcie thrilled, and was himself again in that moment of strong excitement. Faith broke down like a child, and wept. A word at last had been spoken to which even anarchy, red-handed, paused to listen. That brief order would carry through the night; it would fly from camp to camp through the mountain gorges, and every man who caught but the echo of that word would understand. Those who will not heed the voice of law, or soften to the stiller voice of kindness, must pause at last when the bugle sounds: "Attention!"

There was no "weddin' in Spokane,' as Mike had generously predicted; but there was a doctor in Spokane, which was more to the immediate purpose.

The wedding was some months later, when the war was over, and the trials were over, and the technicalities of the law had done much to retract the ringing lesson which the clear-voiced bugles taught. The mines had resumed; Mr. Frederick Bingham had "resigned," and was investigating the Keeley cure; and Darcie Hamilton was sent over as manager of the Big Horn. This time he did stop in New York long enough to protect his claim to the virgin lode he had located, under trying circumstances, the previous summer in the Coeur d'Alene. (The name of it was not the Black Dwarf.) But the complications between that early, rash location and the subsequent patent under law would make another story, with a very different scene-setting. The family discussions, in Darcie's opinion, were far worse than any miners' war. He never knew on which side his best friend would turn up. His mother, for instance, was inflexibly against him, while his father, the most positive of men, was inclined-especially after seeing Faith's picture-to look upon the young man's adventures in the Coeur d'Alene as very much what might have been expected, so why make a row about a thing that was a mistake all around? Darcie by no means considered that any of it was a mistake; but if his father chose to call it so, and to give his consent to his wishes on that understanding, he was willing to yield the point, in name. But Faith declined to go to England, into a family that gave her so cold a welcome. Therefore Darcie came to America as manager of the Big Horn, and the intrepid young pair went westward on their conquering way, and left age and opposition behind them. And if they have disappointed each other's high expectations of happiness, the fact has not as yet transpired to the knowledge of their relatives. Faith celebrates in her letters the wonderful wild flowers of the Cceur the softness of its sudden spring. Other "Chuck me your weepins, Raffy, me persons maintain that the spring has year. Her aunts wonder if the climate has changed. Something has changed. A LOVER OF MUSIC. The Most Stupid of Animals Won by a Flute.

The woodchuck has been deemed one of nature's least interesting experiments in animal life. The farmer usually regards it as a nuisance which stupidly digs holes in the clover-field, or takes up its abode under the stone fence and crops the peas and beans. Dogs are set on it, traps are laid for its feet, and sometimes even a bucket brigade of the entire family is organized to drown it out of its burrow. No one, in fact, has ever been able to discern much which is interesting or intelligent in a woodchuck.

It has remained for one of our subscribers—who has lately left the tenement quarter of an inland city and made a little home for himself in the country on the line of a new electric road—to discover that the woodchuck possesses an ear for music, and may become a devotee of the flute.

land, and made a part of it into a vegetable garden," he writes, "planting and hoeing it evenings after I got out from factory work in town. But woodchucks began to annoy me; they ate my green peas. There was a burrow where a wagon load of yellow earth had been dug out beside a large stone. It was difficult to dislodge them; and presently I saw that there was an old mother woodchuck, and that she had four infants. That burrow, indeed, was a woodchuck nursery. It seemed rather a mean thing to persecute maternity. so I bore with the old lady, catching sight of her and her queer, chubby, furry little babies now and then. "Time ran on till near the first of August, when one Sunday morning, as I sat at the back window of my camp cottage, playing a few notes on a flute, I chanced to glance out, and saw, to my surprise, something-some queer, motionless, yellow-gray object-standing bolt upright not ten yards from the window. It stood so tall, so straight, so still that for a moment I could hardly believe it was one of those young woodchucks-now nearly grown, and as large as a large cat.

"The creature actually seemed to be more than two feet tall. Its black eyes were fixed intently on the window. "Had I charmed it?

"'Flora,' I whispered softly to my wife, who was at the farther end of the room, 'come here quietly and peep out.' "She did so, and I went on playing.

The woodchuck stood as if spellbound. "'Why, the dear, horrid little thing!" Flora whispered. 'Only look at its cunning black paws crossed on its breast! Why, Jim, 'tis saying its prayers to spectacle. If I stopped playing the animal would presently drop to its feet, but when I resumed softly, it would rise and again fold its paws.

"Flora looked quite touched. 'Jim,' she said, 'I think better of your music than I ever did before.'

"But alas, it is only the most stupid little animal in creation that can appreciate my flute!

"For two or three weeks thereafter, till the time for woodchucks to hibernate in September, I was able to call that woodchuck out at almost any hour."-Youth's Companion.

LOVE SIGN OF THE ROSE.

She trained a little rose to grow And grace the gate above; And hence, I love the pathway so That leads me to her love. And oft my heart before me goes To read the love sign of the rose.

Though fairer bloom for lovers' tryst, To me it seems as fair As if an angel's lips had kissed And blessed it, blooming there. For Heaven its sweetest smile bestows On the dear love sign of the rose.

The pattering of little feet, When shadows blur the sight, And rosy-twining arms that meet And necklace me at night. These my glad heart enraptured knows At the dear love sign of the rose.

Not far away Love's steps shall stray In thorny paths to roam, While o'er the meadows of life's May Shine signals sweet of home. When night falls drear, one heart still Good form requires reserve of manner, grace of bearing and refined mod esty to be shown as much in a bathing costume as in a ball dress, therefore one must be more than careful in one's conduct at the seashore.

There is a certain amount of freedom allowable at the seaside and at the mountains, but among refined people it never degenerates into the license shown by public loungers and loudvoiced merriment.-Ladies' World.

IDEA FROM THE WEST.

How Box Irrigation Is Practiced in Many Sections of the So-Called Arid Regions.

Box irrigation, as practiced in many sections of the arid west, is a cheap method of saving fruit trees and vines from the effects of drought, and might be adopted with profit by the fruit growers and market gardeners of the eastern and middle states. It is easily managed from any source of supply such as wells, ponds, creeks or springs, and in dry seasons will return many times the cost in increased yield of fruits, melons and general vine prodacts. The boxes are made of rough pianks, usually about six inches square and 18 inches in length, and inserted in holes a foot or more in depth a few inches from the trees to be irrigated. Water is filled in the boxes and left to find its way to the tree roots, and down til the moisture is taken up by the many branches and rootlets. For vines the boxes are smaller, and may be made from old tin cans, buckets, pieces of tiling or any discarded vessel.

A favorite and handy device for conveying water from the source to the boxes is found in Texas and Arizona, and consists of a barrel fastened to a two-wheeled cart or truck. The barrel is filled and then wheeled about by hand to the several boxes, where the irrigation water is turned in by means of a short hose attached to the barrel. This places the water where needed, precludes all possibility of waste and overcomes the objections to surface irrigation. The trees grow more thrifty and are therefore less attacked by insects and blight. Roots penetrate to a greater depth, giving the tree a firmer hold and preventing sprouts from coming up, as they frequently do all about a surface-irrigated tree. The ground can be cultivated at any time, and the surface soil is free from water, grass and noxious weeds brought on by surface irrigation. An orchard, vineyard or melon patch treated in this manner will yield better, more uniform and salable fruits, and the fears of drought be banished.-Joel Shomaker, in Farm and Fireside.

Why Celery Is Bleached.

It is not for the mere sake of blanching that celery is so treated, for, if this were the case, only self-blanching varieties would be used; but it is to improve the flavor and to make the stalks tender. Care must be taken to avoid heaping the earth so that it gets in among the branches. Hold the stems together with one hand, while with the other the earth is merely a few leaves at the ends. As of course, be repeated. Celery is subject to a blight which attacks the center of the plant. This may be encouraged by soil getting between the stalks, as it has been found, where the plants are boarded up instead of earthed, they are less attacked. - American Cultivator.

The Late Fail Pigs.

The only pig that will attain size enough to safely pass the winter is one that is born six or seven months before cold weather is expected. We have raised pigs in the fall, and that, too, when we had the advantage of a basement barn to provide warm quarters by placing warm milk in with the cold. in ashes which might have yet refor them. Yet the growth during the This seems to be due to the fact that mained intact but for the benevolen winter, notwithstanding good feed, was never satisfactory. There is too little sunlight during the winter months, and if the pig is kept warm without sunlight it is usually at the expense of poor ventilation. Without good air no animal can maintain good digestion or remain healthy.-American Cultivator.

Variety of Food for Pigs.

In most of the discussions about what kinds of food are best, the fact is overlooked that no food except, perhaps, wheat, gives all nutritive elements in their proper combination for best results. A variety of food is needed, not merely to tempt appetite, but to keep the animals in the best health. This is especially important to animals that are being fattened. It is scarcely less so to animals that are growing and which need in some form the elements that make bone and muscle rather than fai. The farmer should understand this and give a variety.-Dakota Field and Farm.

Thirty-Five Thousand Miles of Calico.

There is enough calico made in the United States every year to make a sash which would go completely around the earth with 10,000 miles of material left for a bow. The great popularity of this fabric is justified by the fact that the goods known as Simpson's fast and will not fade nor will the goods become limp with washing and wringing, and as the material is cheap and exceedingly pretty, there is little wonder that many millions of yards are used annually in the dresses of women and claidren.

MRS. PINKHAM'S ADVICE.

What Mrs. Nell Hurst has to Say About It.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:-When I wrote to you I had not been well for five years; had doctored all the time but got no better. I had womb trouble very bad. My womb pressed backward, causing piles. I was in such misery I could scarcely walk across the floor. Menstruction was irregular and too profuse, was also troubled with leucorrhæa. I had given up all hopes of getting well; everybody thought I had consumption. After taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I felt very much better and was able to do nearly all my own work. I continued the use of your medicine, and feel that I owe my recovery to you. I cannot thank you enough for your advice and your wonderful medicine. Any one doubting my statement may write to me and I will gladly answer all inquiries .-- Mrs. NELL HURST, Deepwater, Mo.

Letters like the foregoing, constantly being received, contribute not a little to the satisfaction felt by Mrs. Pinkham that her medicine and counsel are assisting women to bear their heavy burdens.

Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass. All suffering women are invited to write to her for advice, which will be given without charge. It is an experienced woman's advice to women.

The story is told of a gilded youth of Broadway, Council Bluffs, but now residing Chicago whose father employed a private tutor to ram algebra into the young man's head.

In order to simplify the "plus" and "minus" the tutor used the familiar illustration of the counting of years from the birth of Christ.

"Now, for instance, we speak of so many years A. D. or in the year of our Her Heirs and Creditors, Defendants. Lord," he said. "Those years counting from the birth of Christ we may consider as the plus units.
